Second Term English Exam

Duration :02h00

False advertising is any form of advertising that is misleading to the customer. The consumer feels that buying the product would result in them benefiting from the purchase. The advertising might be on television, radio, newspapers, magazines, billboards or the internet. They might advertise that consumers could save money or that the product would perform a certain function.

There are many types of false advertising. The most ordinary kind is when a business raises the price of an item and then lowers it and claims that it is on sale. They give consumers the impression that they are really saving money.

Other companies might claim that customers will get a rebate back on their purchase. However, they do not tell the consumer that the price is after rebate; therefore, customers are paying the full price. In addition, businesses are not known for getting rebates back to customers very quickly.

False advertising is annoying when the product does not deliver what it promised. Consumers can report the company for fraudulent business practices and help put a stop to their deceiving ways.
